Patrons walking from Washington Road should use the sidewalk on the west side of Berckmans Road to access patron tunnel

Masters patron parking in designated lots is free on first-come, first-served basis

Navigating the course

PARKING

All patrons will enter the course at the North Gate or the South Gate. There will be no pedestrian crossing from the eastern sidewalk on Berckmans Road; all pedestrians must cross at the tunnels rather than try to navigate their own way through traffic. Pedestrians on the northern side of Washington Road can cross at Berckmans Road or at Old Berckmans Road crosswalks. For safety purposes, pedestrians should not cross Washington Road anywhere other than approved crosswalks. More than 8,500 free parking spaces are available in lots off Berckmans Road. Look for white signs that read, "Free Patron Parking." There is no free parking east of Berckmans.

GETTING TO THE COURSE

Signs will be posted to direct traffic. Patrons should pay attention to signs and the officers directing traffic rather than try to use their vehicles' or smartphones' navigation systems. Officials will close the eastbound ramp from Interstate 20 to Washington Road from 7:30 to 10 a.m. each day to help direct traffic through the proper routes. Berckmans Road connects to Washington Road at Alexander Drive. Berckmans has a center turn lane, sidewalks, extra lighting and tunnels – two for pedestrians and one for vehicles.

WHEN IT'S TIME TO GO

Berckmans Road will be one way heading south from 4 to 9 p.m. each day to speed up and simplify patrons' exit from the course. During that period, there will also be no left turns from Berckmans
